

Five Ridiculously Good Reasons to Minor in

CREATIVE WRITING

1

Express yourself with clarity and confidence.

No matter your major, developing your voice and sharing your thoughts is important. Creative writing can help you express yourself with style.

2

Become a better storyteller.

Data's great. Knowledge is grand. But storytelling? Now THAT's a tool for influencing leaders, creating change, and shaping your career.

3

Join a community that spans disciplines.

Did you know that TCNJ's Creative Writing minor includes approximately 30% students from outside the Department of English? We're open to all!

4

Build transferable skills for real-life careers.

Planning, research, organization, time management, emotional intelligence—these are just a few of the skills you'll pick up in Creative Writing.

5

Launch into a growing industry.

In 2023, the writing industry grew by 4%. Plus: doctors, lawyers, engineers, and others are using writing skills to broaden their skills and earn more.
